HONORS COURSES

Honors courses at RSU are specifically designed to challenge students, as well as provide a supportive learning environment for this community of scholars. The honors courses are designed to integrate curriculum, develop and integrate learning communities, and assist in the integration and oversight of service-learning opportunities.

SERVICE LEARNING

The Honors Program requires students to engage in at least 25 hours of service per year with government agencies, social service agencies, or non-commercial entities. This "service learning" component allows students to enrich their educational experiences via interaction with organizations that serve local, regional, national, or international communities. Service learning projects will be "real world" work that directly relates to the student's areas of academic or professional interests. All projects will be approved in advance by the faculty advisor and Director of the Honors Program.
