MEMORIAL NEARING COMPLETION OMA REUNION COMMITTEE SEARCHING FOR FAMILY MEMBERS OF KIA HONOREES

A freshly polished black granite monument engraved with the names of 99 former Oklahoma Military Academy cadets will soon stand front and center on the Rogers State University campus in Claremore.

The Oklahoma Military Academy Killed In Action Memorial will be dedicated on Saturday, June 4, following the traditional Morning Formation Ceremony as members of the remaining OMA cadets gather for their annual reunion. It will be one of the most significant events to take place on The Hill since the OMA flag was lowered in the spring of 1971.

Last year, during the 2010 reunion luncheon, Alumni President Randy Vierling ('63) and members of the Alumni Board of Directors brought new life to a recurring alumni vision to construct a lasting tribute to those who gave their lives during World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam War. The response, since then, has been overwhelming. Gifts received and pending pledges are funding the memorial construction and the balance will establish an endowment benefiting student scholarships, the OMA Museum and the perpetual upkeep of the monument.

Special guests at the dedication ceremony will include members of the honored men's families along with military dignitaries, and state and federal officials. A special alumni task force – chaired by Alumni Vice President Phil Goldfarb ('69) and OMA Museum Curator Gene Little ('56), working with OMA Alumni Coordinator Brandi Sutherland and an expert researcher – has been working to identify, locate and contact family members. The results have been rewarding.

"We have found family members, or people we believe to be family members for around 55 of the men who will be listed on the memorial," Sutherland said. Some family members have already confirmed plans to attend.

Goldfarb is hoping others will join them. "We are asking anyone who may know surviving family members and

GENERAL REIMER TO SPEAK AT KIA MEMORIAL DEDICATION

General Dennis J. Reimer will serve as keynote speaker for the dedication ceremony of the OMA KIA Memorial on Saturday, June 4, during the OMA reunion on the RSU campus in Claremore. The ceremony, which is open to the public, will begin at 9:15 a.m.

Gen. Reimer is a native of Medford, Okla., and a 1962 graduate of the United States Military Academy. He served 37 years in the U.S. Army, retiring as the 33rd Chief of Staff in 1999.

descendants of the men we are honoring to let us know how to get in contact with them,” he said.

In addition to family members, several classmates of the fallen cadets are making plans to take part in the dedication ceremonies, attending the reunion for the first time.

Thousands of OMA cadets served meritoriously in war theaters throughout the world and 10 attained the rank of general, including Lt. General William E. Potts (‘41), who participated in 15 campaigns during World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War. Potts was promoted by Gen.

George Patton and became the youngest field grade officer to lead a battalion in Europe. Lt. Col. Edwin P. Ramsey (‘37), a member of the Academy’s last Cavalry Unit, led the last horse cavalry charge in U.S. wartime history as a young officer serving in the Phillipines during WWII. His captivating story can be read in his book “Lieutenant Ramsey’s War.” In addition, 25 and possibly more OMA cadets received prestigious appointments to the nation’s service academies including West Point, Air Force and Annapolis.

OMA ALUMNI ASSOCIATION ANNOUNCES 2011 DISTINGUISHED ALUMNI

The names of two more outstanding Oklahoma Military Academy alumni will be added to the already-crowded Wall of Fame in the OMA Museum on the Rogers State University campus in June.

Recipients of the OMA Alumni Association's Distinguished Alumni award will be honored on Saturday, June 4, at RSU in Claremore when hundreds of former OMA cadets return to The Hill for annual reunion activities.

This year's OMA Distinguished Alumni are Warren M. Rodgers of Sherwood, Ark., and Robert "Blaine" Jones of Pryor, Okla.

"We are pleased to present the Distinguished Alumni Awards to these men who have brought honor to the Oklahoma Military Academy through their many years of dedicated service to their communities and country," said RSU President Larry Rice.

The annual Distinguished Alumni Awards Ceremony is a reunion tradition.

A highlight of this year's reunion will be the public dedication of the new OMA Killed In Action Memorial on the RSU campus. The memorial will be a granite pyramid etched with the names of more than 100 OMA cadets who are known to have died.

OMA reunion events also will include a golf tournament, morning formation and cadet memorial service, and Distinguished Alumni Awards Ceremony.

Following is more information about this year's OMA Distinguished Alumni.

Robert "Blaine" Jones

Robert "Blaine" Jones attended OMA during 1952-53. He enlisted in the U.S. Air Force in March of 1957 and retired as a Colonel in July 1989, with many awards and decorations from flying three combat tours in Vietnam and subsequent tactical fighter leadership positions.

Jones earned a bachelor's degree from the University of Tulsa, an M.B.A. from Georgia State University and a J.D. from the Oklahoma City University School of Law.

His legal practice is now limited to providing pro bono assistance to active duty military, veterans, their spouses and children. He is on the Board of Directors of the RSU Foundation and other organizations that assist those less fortunate.

Warren M. Rodgers

Warren M. Rodgers has enjoyed a distinguished career in business, operating his own men's clothing store for seven years and providing leadership for several real estate companies for 33 years. He retired in 2004.

For the past 40 years, Rodgers has provided assistance for needy families (some homeless) assisting with housing, utilities and food until they could get back on their feet.

Rodgers attended one year of high school and two years of junior college at the Oklahoma Military Academy, from 1959 to 1962. He went on to attend Arkansas Technical College. He served in the Army National Guard from 1966 to 1972, promoted to the rank of platoon sergeant. During his service, he was activated twice to help quell race riots in central Arkansas. He has served on the OMA Board of Directors since 2009.

REPORT TO THE HILL UPDATE

From near and far, men who share the Oklahoma Military Academy experience are making plans to gather together again on The Hill in Claremore on June 3 and 4.

This year's Report to the Hill event has something for everyone. The reunion schedule includes opportunities for classmates to reunite and spend time reminiscing with friends and making new ones. The reunion is also an open invitation to revisit once familiar places on campus that may or may not have changed with the passing of time.

REUNION SCHEDULE REVIEW

Early arrivals, on Friday, June 3, can enjoy a morning round at the Heritage Hills Golf Course, located west of the RSU campus on Clubhouse Road. Alumni Office staff will be on hand to welcome you with donuts and coffee and lunch at noon. For some, this event is a unique way to trek down memory lane as the golf course was used in the past for military training exercises.

A change of schedule note for the ladies: The annual Dutch treat ladies luncheon is back and will take place at The Pink House restaurant in historic downtown Claremore at 11:30 a.m. New this year is a Tea for the Ladies hosted by RSU First Lady Peggy Rice in the President's Residence on campus at 2 p.m.

On Friday afternoon from 3 to 5, the Student Recreation Room and OMA Student Lounge in the Centennial Center (located on the site of the old Post Hall) will be reserved for OMA alumni who want to play pool and ping pong or just visit.

You do not want to miss the Reunion Opening Reception on Friday evening starting at 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. in the Centennial Center Ballroom.

The 145th Army Band will perform at the OMA Reunion Morning Formation and the Dedication Ceremony for the OMA Killed In Action Memorial.

Saturday's Reunion reveille begins at 9:15 with the traditional Morning Formation at the flag pole followed by the dedication of the OMA Killed In Action Memorial. General Dennis Reimer will be the keynote speaker for this event as alumni and RSU officials honor OMA cadets who died in World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam War.

Following the dedication will be the Distinguished Alumni and Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony, the Alumni Luncheon in the Centennial Center, and an Ice Cream Social in the OMA Museum in Meyer Hall (former OMA barracks).

Concluding reunion activities will be a Reception, Dinner and Dance at 6 p.m. in the RSU Centennial Ballroom, featuring the band "Good Company," with music for all ages.

If you have not yet registered, see the enclosed registration brochure or visit the OMA web page at www.rsu.edu/oma. You also can call the RSU Alumni Office at 918-343-7773.

OMA-TO-U.S. SERVICE ACADEMIES

"We proudly open the Military Division with the picture of OMA grads who are now in West Point: Ronald N. Williams, Frank C. Gibbs, Thomas E. Murray, Paul M. Jones, Christian M. Shore, and Orlin L. Mullen." – Vedette, 1963; page 127.

In 2010, recognition of the accomplishments of OMA cadets included a presentation of Purple Heart recipients at the Reunion's Morning Formation. Another group of outstanding OMA cadets has now been identified: OMA cadets who attended U.S. service academies.

Documenting the 52-year history of the Oklahoma Military Academy continues to be a priority for the OMA Alumni Association and Rogers State University. Please forward any additions or corrections to the attention of Gene Little, OMA Museum curator.

ROLL CALL: WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Joe R. Brassfield ('54) "Just happened to run across the OMA website and saw his name as a 'Lost Alumni.'" His address during enrollment at OMA from 1951-54 was Ras Tanura, Saudi Arabia. His father was employed by (Aramco) Arabian American Oil Company. Brassfield is now retired from the Port of Houston after 25 years of employment and a second retirement from Spring (Texas) Independent School District after 21 years. He is now a resident of Kingwood, Texas.

Willard (Bill) L. Denny ('64) recently moved from Tulsa to Broken Arrow, Okla. "I hope to attend the reunion this year for the first time."

Juanita (Simpson) Christian "I think my Father [Cadet Robert (Bob) Simpson ('48)] would be pleased to know I took his things back to OMA to be among other fellow cadets' memorabilia. With the history of OMA [Gene Little] shared with me and the stories Dad told me, it made everything come together. It just feels right in my heart to do this."

Original Science Library Building constructed on OMA Campus ('51 Vedette).

During the summer, the Science Library Building was expanded, adding 13,000 square feet of classroom and laboratory space and doubling the original space allotted to the library.

BAIRD HALL: WHAT WAS OLD IS NEW AGAIN!

Baird Hall has had a reliable, yet unassuming presence on the Rogers State University campus for more than 60 years.

The building's original Usonian design, now cloaked in a much larger and more traditional campus façade, was a classic reflection of architectural trends prevalent in 1951 – large plate glass windows, flat roof lines and organic features such as a fish pond under the staircase.

Its first academic purpose was to house the science department and library services for the Oklahoma Military Academy. The science and mathematics classrooms were eventually relocated to Loshbaugh Hall. And, the library was dismantled and moved, book by book, from Baird Hall to a renovated Thunderbird Hall* in the mid 1970s.

From the 1970s forward, Baird Hall has been home to the study of the arts. What started as a 13,000-square-foot learning center for OMA cadets has now more than quadrupled in square footage. Now a 57,000-square-foot facility, Baird Hall contains many of the leading-edge features associated with higher learning today, including classrooms equipped with Smart Boards, a performance studio, and an amphitheater-style classroom for learning outdoors on sunny days.

The re-opening occurred in September 2010 as RSU experienced yet another semester of record enrollment with more than 4,400 students.

Baird Hall is named after Lt. Col. Ralph E. Baird, who taught mathematics at the Oklahoma Military Academy from 1942 to 1965. Lt. Col. Baird also served as Dean of Administration during his tenure at OMA.

"He was a beloved teacher," says John Baird, one of Lt. Col. Baird's two sons, both of whom live with their families in Bartlesville. "But he was more than that – he also was a personal counselor and tutor for the cadets. As a child, I recall them visiting our house during many evenings – but it may have just been to get out of the barracks!"

Lt. Col. Baird lived on the OMA campus with his family in staff housing south of Markham Hall, which was then Markham Barracks.

A tradition of teaching – mathematics in particular – runs in the Baird family. John Baird taught math at Bartlesville High School from 1970 to 2005. John also attended OMA as a cadet in 1960-61.

His brother, Dale Baird, is an engineer, having recently retired after a long career with Phillips Petroleum Co. in Bartlesville. Dale also has the distinction of having taught briefly at OMA. "I was home during spring break and I recall one morning my father said 'get dressed, you're going to teach a class.' One of his teachers was injured in an automobile accident and couldn't teach the class. I think I taught algebra for two weeks or so, under my father and President (Homer) Ledbetter."

Two of Dale Baird's daughters taught school at one time or another and all three of John Baird's daughters are teachers, including Trish Jones of Owasso, who has served

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Baird

The rededication of Baird Hall was held in September 2010. The most recent renovation and expansion of Baird Hall, yet another milestone in the evolution of this important campus building, quadrupled the original 13,000-square-foot building.

"We anticipated improvements to this building for a long time and couldn't be happier with the result," said Gary Moeller, art professor and one of the university's longest-serving faculty members. Moeller celebrated the first day of classes by wearing a tuxedo.

Baird Hall houses the Department of Communications, Department of English and Humanities, Department of Fine Arts, and Department of History and Political Science. The RSU-Cameron University Education Program is also located in Baird Hall. It is home to the university's burgeoning Honors Program, with a special classroom, computer laboratory, and conference room for advanced placement students.

The main entrance plaza at the new Baird Hall has been named The Mary K. Chapman Plaza in honor of a gift from The Mary K. Chapman Foundation of Tulsa. The Chapman Foundation provided a significant gift for the plaza and the completion of the Baird Hall project.

Those entering the main plaza entrance on the southeast corner of the building will be greeted by a six-foot-tall statue of Will Rogers, the iconic folk hero who grew up in the Claremore, Okla., area.

 Library services are now provided in the Stratton Taylor Library. Thunderbird Hall was removed to make way for the Centennial Center.*

as an adjunct instructor at the RSU campus in Claremore. Trish teaches – you guessed it – algebra and statistics at RSU.

"We all share an aptitude for math," Jones says. "I think we also share a great concern for our students."

Trish's youngest sister, Lori Hollingsworth, teaches math at Alcott Middle School in Norman, Okla., and her middle sister, Sara Senter, is a former math teacher living in Ellensburg, Wash.

The Baird brothers – Dale and John – recall their father's passion and dedication to teaching, which also was recognized by OMA President Homer Ledbetter, his administration and OMA board members. Baird Hall was named for Lt. Col. Ralph Baird when it was completed in 1953.

"He began his career teaching math at a junior high school in Guthrie (Okla.)," Dale said. "He also was a dedicated serviceman but was too old to serve in World War II. As a result, he was recruited to teach and train officers at the OMA."

Lt. Col. Baird was well respected and admired by his students, evidenced by the fact that two issues of the "Vedette," the OMA yearbook, were dedicated to him.

When he retired from OMA in 1965, he moved to Bartlesville to be closer to his sons, Dale and John. He died there in 1993.

Today, both Baird brothers continue to call Bartlesville their home. Dale Baird lives with his wife Carlotta Baird, and John Baird and his wife Dr. Rita Baird are also enjoying retirement. They are proud of their family's legacy and commitment to education.

BIRDS AND BOOKS RECALL COL. DOUGLAS

A pair of royal mute swans can now be seen floating on Douglas Lake, near the main entrance of Rogers State University. This pair, and a female royal mute released on Hart Lake as a companion to 10-year-old "Sarge," formerly the lone campus swan, was donated by Nash and Dana Lamb, Pryor, Okla.

Dana is the current past chairman of the RSU Foundation. She located the swans at Groen's Wildlife Services in Cedar Lake, Ind. The University's Physical Plant staff constructed floating platforms to ensure the safety of the birds.

Douglas Lake and its wildlife features have long been a focal point for the campus. The lake's history dates back to 1935. Its namesake, Colonel Clarence B. Douglas, was secretary of the Inland Waterways Commission. He envisioned the lake in the natural depression near the campus entrance. When constructed, the deepest point in the lake was 40 feet.

Col. Douglas also donated a 143-volume historical account of the Civil War, "Records and Reports of the War of the Rebellion" to OMA. These vintage volumes are currently housed in the Archives Room of the Stratton Taylor Library.

REIMER TO SPEAK AT REUNION

Reimer's career in the U.S. Army spanned the era between the Vietnam War and the military transformation that began at the end of the Cold War. A two-tour veteran of Vietnam, Reimer spent more than eight years of his career overseas. As a Major, he served as the Aide-de-Camp for Chief of Staff Army General Creighton W. Abrams. He has commanded at all levels from Company to Army.

In 1982 Reimer was selected for promotion to Brigadier General. His next three assignments were Commander III Corp Artillery at Fort Sill, Okla.; Operations Officer in the Republic of Korea; and Commanding General Fourth Infantry Division at Fort Carson.

In 1988 he was selected for promotion to Lieutenant General and served as the Plans and Operations Officer for the Army during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. Upon completion of that assignment he was selected for promotion and assigned as the Vice Chief of Staff for the U.S. Army in 1990. In 1995 he was selected as the 33rd Chief of Staff for the U.S. Army, then served as the Commanding General Forces Command, responsible for all Army active and reserve component forces in the U.S.

On April 1, 2000, General Reimer assumed duties as the Director of the National Memorial for the Prevention of Terrorism (MIPT) in Oklahoma City. With a national focus, MIPT supported emergency responders across the nation. During his tenure, MIPT was able to develop and field three national programs – Lessons Learned Information Sharing, Terrorism Knowledge Base, and Responder Knowledge Base. These programs improved information sharing for emergency responders and successfully strengthened the partnership among federal, state, and local governments.

Currently, Gen. Reimer is President of Army Emergency Relief and a member of the Board of Trustees for the Association of the US Army. He also serves on the Board of Directors for Mutual of America and DRS Technology.

OMA CADET INSTRUMENTAL IN HISTORIC WWII MOMENT

Among the memorabilia and personal effects donated by many prestigious OMA alumni in the OMA Museum in Meyer Hall, you will find a small tribute to a lone cadet named Dallas Meade, '28.

Meade penned one of the most significant documents in U.S. military history – the “Instrument of Surrender,” which, when signed, effectively ended the war.

The only known reproduction of the signed copy of this historic document resides in the OMA Museum, thanks to Robert Meade ('51), brother of Dallas Meade, who donated it for safekeeping in 1995.

According to an excerpt from an article written by Pat Upton in the Tulsa World, Dallas Meade was asked to prepare “10 ‘perfect’ copies of the vital ‘Instrument of Surrender’” late on Sept. 1, 1945. Being a designer and an artist serving the general staff in Washington, D.C., Meade was up to the task. According to Upton’s article, the necessary parchment paper was not readily available so Meade used “some high-quality English paper he was saving for a creative tangent.”

Before dawn, he had completed the 10 copies, which were flown to Tokyo where the concession ceremony took place aboard the quarterdeck of the U.S.S. Missouri.

One original surrender document is held in the National Archives in Washington, D.C. Another original was given to the Japanese leadership. Robert Meade told Upton that he had seen a third signed copy sometime in the late 1940s when he visited his brother, Dallas, in Tulsa. The whereabouts of that document and the remaining seven is not known.

Recently, Phil Goldfarb ('63), who enjoys researching historical facts, came across the original film footage from the Sept. 2, 1945, surrender ceremony on YouTube. Clearly, the documents Meade created with his own hands are central to the event.

“I had never seen this in its entirety before and thought that it was very interesting,” said Goldfarb. “Since it was a former OMA cadet who actually wrote the document that all these people are signing, and we have that case in the museum dedicated to him, I wonder if it might be worthwhile to take this footage, put it on a continual ‘loop’ and show it at the museum in some type of small kiosk.” While Goldfarb’s suggestion is still up for discussion, you can see the footage and the documents by logging onto www.youtube.com and searching for “Japanese Surrender.”

Cecil Dallas Meade, Jr. was the son of a clergyman, Cecil Dallas Meade, Sr. They lived in Miami, Okla. In the 1930 census, Dallas Meade was working as an “artist” for a “drug company.” He enlisted on May 19, 1943, as a private at the age of 31 (born in 1912). His civilian job was as a commercial artist.

OMA BAND PHOTO AMONG LATEST ADDITION TO DIGITAL ARCHIVES

Oklahoma Military Academy band instruments were showcased in the Craig Music Store window at 106 E. 3rd Street in downtown Tulsa, Okla., in the early 1940s. The photo comes from the Beryl Ford Collection housed at the Tulsa Historical Society and the Tulsa City County Library. This photo and other OMA-related information have been added to the growing historical reference DVD created and maintained by Charles Emerson ('56), along with Gene Little ('56), OMA Museum volunteer curator. The latest DVD update will be available at the June reunion. First-time purchases are $50 ($45 of purchase price is a tax-deductible gift). Updates for previous purchases are only $10 each.

BLAST FROM THE PAST

Phil Goldfarb ('69), vice president of the 2010-2011 OMA Alumni Board, is seen reading graduates' names during the 50th Commencement in 1969. Goldfarb served as the Corps of Cadets Adjutant. Col. John E. Horne is passing out diplomas on the right, and the person sitting to the left of the podium is Brig. General William Hamrick ('32), who was the guest speaker that day. "If I were only that skinny again!" says Goldfarb.
