2011 OMA ALUMNI REUNION DESCRIBED AS 'BEST EVER'

The Oklahoma Military Academy closed in 1971, but you would have never known it, if you were in attendance at the 2011 OMA Annual Reunion on "College Hill." The former OMA cadets attending were a few years older, however some were in uniforms, the band was playing, several Generals were present, and there were ceremonies, dinner and dancing – much like the heydays of OMA.

The renowned Oklahoma Military Academy, once known as the West Point of the Southwest is now

Larry Lantow, OMA '38

On the days after Christmas in 1944 – after he successfully led an Army patrol through a dangerous mission in Belgium for which he received a Bronze Star – Larry Lantow was asked to report to Major General Rose.

"I thought, oh boy, what have I done?" recalls Lantow, a 1938 graduate of the Oklahoma Military Academy.

What the General told him still brings tears to his eyes to this day.

"He told me that 600 citizens of Claremore had signed a petition to bring me home," he said.

The petition was approved by the U.S. Congress, and the order was issued by President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Lantow's parents had already lost two boys in the war – his brothers Robert Lantow, 23, and Norman Lantow, 20,

LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT

Bill Ramsay

Dear OMA Alumni,

Let me start with a salute and a big thank you to all of the Oklahoma Military Academy Alumni and guests that came from both near and far to attend the 2011 Reunion. The dedication of the OMA Killed In Action Memorial was truly an inspiring event. We were especially honored to have General Dennis J. Reimer deliver an outstanding keynote address.

Once again the Rogers State University staff did a great job of organizing the many events and making everyone feel at home again on 'The Hill.' Special thanks once more to my predecessor Randy Vierling for his leadership and vision these past two years, and to David Raper who served us so well as our Reunion Adjutant.

As we look toward the future, your Alumni Association Board of Directors are engaged and at work. The mission and goals of the Association are under review. We are looking forward to Dr. Danette Boyle's role as Executive Director of the OMA Alumni Association. Locating "lost" alumni continues to be a priority. Gene Little has been working to update the alumni list, which now contains about 1500 names. You will be hearing more about plans to increase the emphasis on this vital endeavor.

The 2012 reunion date has been set as June 8th and 9th, so mark your calendars accordingly, and plan to reach out to a buddy to join you. Newly elected board member, Timothy Malishenko, Maj. Gen., USAF (Ret.), class of '63, has agreed to serve as our Adjutant.

In closing, I would like to thank RSU President Dr. Larry Rice for his continuing support that we may, in his words--- "continue to preserve and share the spirit and legacy of OMA." I'm looking forward to doing that as I serve as your OMA Alumni Association President in the months ahead.

DR. DANETTE BOYLE: EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

After 38 years serving Rogers State University and its predecessor institutions, Dr. Danette Boyle retired in June from her position as RSU Vice President for Development. Presently, she begins a labor of love, serving as Executive Director of the Oklahoma Military Academy Alumni Association. Recently, Boyle spoke about “retirement,” the rewards of working with OMA and her plans for the future.

How did you reach the decision to remain involved with the OMA alumni after retiring from your position as Vice President for Development?

I decided it was time to travel more and spend more time with my family. Dr. Rice and I discussed how I could continue to serve RSU and we agreed there would be benefit to RSU and the OMA Alumni Association if I would work with the OMA alumni. I thought it was a great idea.

I love Rogers State University and one of my true passions is working with the OMA alumni. I was here when we started the organization, worked with its members the entire 38 years and I sincerely enjoy the time I spend with this group of alumni.

What will your priorities be as Executive Director?

I hope we’ll have more time to focus on the things that have always been priorities: finding OMA alumni; searching out compelling stories from our history; recruiting more alumni to participate in the reunions; developing opportunities for scholarship endowments; and keeping alumni abreast of RSU news, activities, and student accomplishments.

Will there be new projects as well?

One project that is being discussed is an initiative to establish a mentoring program for current RSU students. In reality, OMA alumni have been very successful. In addition to the 10 men that became general officers, there are countless alumni who went on to become highly successful in the business world, medical field, legal field, theatre, art and all disciplines. Their experiences will be a real benefit to today’s students.

Of course, the OMA alumni have been very supportive of the new Military History degree at RSU. It’s our goal to grow that program by establishing scholarship endowments to assist talented students in the program.

There also are plans to assist in reestablishing ROTC on campus. These initiatives will provide a direct benefit to current RSU students and demonstrate the commitment OMA alumni have made to support the university.

BOYLE: EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Has it been rewarding for you to witness the OMA alumni's continued involvement with the university as it has evolved?

It's been the most professionally rewarding thing I could have experienced. I have had the privilege of watching RSU evolve into an excellent regional university with tremendous students, while maintaining its focus on first-generation college students and students giving college a second chance. To see the OMA alumni adopt Rogers State with such enthusiasm has been more rewarding than I can describe. The OMA alumni have been very supportive of all the initiatives that have led to Rogers State becoming the excellent university it is.

We recently celebrated the dedication of the OMA Killed In Action Memorial. Do you consider it the "crown jewel" of OMA efforts so far?

I would have to put the OMA KIA memorial among our top accomplishments, along with the overall development of the association, the many years of annual reunions, the many alumni that have established scholarship endowments, and finding OMA alumni who were lost and bringing them back to campus.

Along with its members, what factors have contributed to the success of the OMA Alumni Association?

I think we need to give a lot of credit to the presidents of the institution. Colonel John Horne, who was the last president of OMA and the first president of Claremore Junior College during its first months, was active in the alumni association up until his death just a few years ago. Dr. Richard Mosier, who was hired to make the transition to Claremore Junior College, was very instrumental in maintaining the history and tradition of the OMA and was very supportive of establishing the OMA Alumni Association. President Roger Randall was very supportive as well. Dr. Joe Wiley who was hired to develop the institution into a regional university worked a great deal to maintain the relationship with OMA alumni and seek out lost alumni. Dr. Larry Rice, who is our president now, wrote his dissertation on the Oklahoma Military Academy. OMA could not have a better friend than Dr. Rice. The presidents have all been very supportive of the OMA Alumni Association and it couldn't have happened without them.

How important is the involvement of OMA alumni to the continued success of RSU and its students?

That's very important. OMA alumni impact RSU students in a number of ways. One is just the fact that this institution is blessed with the history and tradition of having an excellent military school here for 52 years. That's been a vital ingredient of the university's reputation and confidence in our rich history.

Our OMA alumni have been very involved. They have served on our board of regents, on the RSU Foundation board, and of course they have their own board of directors. Many of them also have been involved in establishing scholarship endowments over the years. Many have established personal scholarship endowments, and groups of alumni - the 1940s, 50s, 60s and 70s - have established scholarship endowments, many alumni have together established an endowment for the OMA museum, and more and more are including RSU in their estate planning. All of those endowments benefit students who attend Rogers State today and will for generations to come.

The personal and professional accomplishments of the OMA alumni are incredible. I could give you name after name of men who have lived remarkable lives and established tremendous legacies. They have great ideas about the OMA Alumni Association and are very interested in the future of Rogers State University.

2011 REUNION 'BEST EVER'

Rogers State University, one of the fastest growing regional universities in Oklahoma. The campus is often described as having the most beautiful natural setting of any university in the state of Oklahoma.

The Oklahoma Military Academy Alumni and Rogers State University (known as Claremore Junior College at the time) joined forces back in the early 70s to have OMA Alumni Annual reunions and have never missed a year.

This year may well be the best OMA Reunion ever held on College Hill. As Phil Goldfarb, OMA class of 1969, said, "This OMA Reunion, with the dedication of the Oklahoma Military Academy Killed in Action Memorial on Saturday, was the most outstanding, singular event ever to happen on College Hill."

Approximately 185 alumni were present and another 250 family and friends attended. This included many family members of the 100 OMA Alumni that were Killed In Action during WWII, Korea and Vietnam. Their names were inscribed on the OMA KIA Memorial.

The dedication was highlighted by Four-Star General Dennis Reimer, United States Army (Retired) and former Chief of Staff of the Army, who presented the keynote speech at the dedication. General Reimer is the highest ranking native Oklahoman that ever served in the military. In his remarks he said, "Today we are reminded of the proud history of OMA and the contributions of all the cadets, but most importantly we remember the 100 former graduates who gave the last full measure of devotion for their country. They exhibited undaunted courage, honor beyond reproach and loyalty to the institution that turned them from boys to men, as well as, loyalty to a nation that needed them to keep the dream alive."

The President of the OMA Alumni Association, Randy Vierling, OMA class of 1963, conceived the idea of the OMA KIA Memorial in May of 2010 and presented the plan, including how to raise the funds, at the 2010 Reunion. No one could have dreamed that the fundraising would have concluded with $150,000 raised to build the Memorial far above the actual cost. Nearly $50,000 remains in a permanent endowment with proceeds to be used for the maintenance of the Memorial, the OMA Museum and scholarships for RSU students majoring in Military History.

This reunion was a resounding success in everyone's mind and most importantly the hearts of those that attended. The OMA Alumni that attended for the first time were overwhelmed with the dedication of the Memorial and all the reunion events.

Some Alumni ask, "What do we do next year?" The OMA Alumni Board of Directors is already hard at work answering those questions. They are committed to finding more lost alumni, developing a mentoring program for RSU students and making plans for the 2012 reunion.

Gene Little, OMA Class of 1956, who serves as the OMA Museum Curator, said, "I would never underestimate the possibilities for the next reunion. We are finding lost alumni every day and we want all the alumni that did not attend this reunion to come next year to see the breathtaking OMA KIA Memorial. I think 2012 will be another extraordinary reunion."

The new president of the OMA Board of Directors, Bill

Ramsay, OMA Class of 1961, recently met with RSU President Larry Rice and said, "With Dr. Danette Boyle, in her new position as the Executive Director of the OMA Alumni Association, the association will continue to improve and expand. Plans are being made now to develop an even stronger supportive relationship with RSU."

The 2012 OMA Reunion is scheduled for June 8 and 9. Register now by contacting Danette Boyle at dboyle@rsu.edu or 918-343-6888 or 918-381-8764.

were killed during the Allied invasion of Normandy just six months earlier. His parents, and the community, wanted him home.

"I didn't want to go, but he told me that I didn't have any choice."

Lantow was the oldest of seven children. Remaining in the home were three sisters and one brother, Bill Lantow, who went on to serve with distinction in the U.S. Marines during the Korean War.

Also at home was his high school sweetheart Lena Mae Ross. Her brother, Edwin Ross, who also attended OMA, was yet another casualty of the war. His name appears on the new OMA Killed in Action Memorial on the Rogers State University campus.

Larry and Lena Mae were married in August 1943, before he went overseas in 1944.

When he returned, he moved to Tulsa, where he earned a business degree at the University of Tulsa and embarked upon a long and successful career in the lumber industry.

It was lumber that gave Lantow his start. After graduating from Claremore High School, he and his parents didn't have enough money to send him to college. So he worked for a year at King-Lawrence Lumber Company in Claremore and saved enough money to purchase a second-hand uniform to attend OMA. A scholarship helped pay for tuition and books.

"I was a day student and lived with my parents," he recalled. "At that time, day students took a lot of ribbing. We didn't have the traditional rabbit experience, but we were full-fledged cadets nonetheless."

He and Don Ruggles, OMA '39, drove Don's car to 'The Hill' every day to attend classes. At OMA, Lantow played the trombone in Captain P.H. (Power House) Kelly's band.

"Like most of my fellow cadets, it was a life-changing experience," Lantow said. "It helped to shape much of my character, and provided me with the educational background and skills to succeed, both in military and civilian life."

After graduating from OMA, he worked four more years at King-Lawrence Lumber before joining the Volunteer Officer Training Corps in 1942. He initially completed a two-week induction at Fort Sill, Okla., where the leader inside him emerged. He was placed in charge of 75 men who made the journey from Fort Sill to Fort Knox, Kentucky, where they completed basic training.

He went on to complete Officer Candidate School at Fort Knox and joined the 7th Army Division in the summer of 1943. He continued his training at Fort Benning, Georgia, and he and Lena Mae were married in August 1943. They returned to Fort Knox, where he taught recruits how to drive armored vehicles.

Then, on June 7, 1944, the day following the Normandy invasion, he boarded the Queen Mary and headed for Glasgow, Scotland. He was quickly sent to France as a replacement officer and shared responsibility for a fleet of seven tanks during the battle of the Falaise Pocket, a decisive engagement.

"Like most of my fellow cadets, [OMA] was a life-changing experience, it helped to shape much of my character, and provided me with the educational background and skills to succeed, both in military and civilian life." – Larry Lantow

"The 1st Lieutenant, who had only been there a few weeks, was serving as the company commander and he told me, 'I'll take four tanks and you take three.'"

His division was the first to cross the Maginot Line into Germany, where they fortified several villages. Upon returning to Belgium, he was assigned to a task force which would lead to the end of his tour in Europe.

"Shortly after Christmas, the Germans had stopped shelling us in the Ardennes. I took a patrol of 12 men to locate the German forces. We walked through the valley then jumped the outpost. The Germans began shelling in the valley, but we had already moved the patrol to the ridge of the hill. It was a difficult mission, but we didn't lose a single man that day."

For that, Lantow's company commander recommended him for the Bronze Star. The next day, he received the call from General Rose which led to his homecoming.

As he began his new life in Tulsa, he continued to serve as a Captain in the U.S. Army Reserves for six and a half years. He attended TU on the GI Bill and worked part-time at Hope Lumber in Tulsa. His wife, Lena Mae, worked at the First National Bank in downtown Tulsa.

After college, Hope Lumber offered him a full-time job. He and Lena Mae lived in Tulsa until she passed away in 1964. He would remain with the company for 36 years until his retirement in 1982.

During retirement, he earned his real estate license and began practicing in Tulsa. He met his present wife, Ola Mae, in church, and they began a second life together. Between the two of them, they have two daughters, and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren. They moved to Inverness Village in Tulsa in 2003, where they live today.

During the last several years, Lantow played a key role in recruiting alumni from the 1930s to attend the annual OMA reunions. He presently serves as a member of the Board of Directors of the OMA Alumni Association.

"He's really one of our last remaining and strongest links to that generation," said Dr. Danette Boyle, who recently began her role as the new Executive Director of the OMA Alumni Association. "Even at 94, he's one of our most active and valuable volunteers."

The 1938 Guidon yearbook described Lantow as having "unaffected grace."

"I can't think of a better way to describe Larry," Boyle said. "Unaffected grace describes him perfectly. He hasn't changed a bit!" – Brent Ortolani

NOTES FROM THE OMA ARCHIVES

Gene Little, '56

■ A recent find, a 1927 "Tulsa Daily World" editorial, calls for recognition of Oklahoma Military Academy as one of Oklahoma's three major educational institutions.

"... the legislature should now announce such a policy and begin without further delay the creation of an educational plant there (in Claremore) where military training may be had, proportionately as important and as beautiful as the University at Norman or the A. & M. College at Stillwater." – The Tulsa Daily World

■ Recent research reveals that the gravestone for Maurice Meyer, the namesake for Meyer Hall (formerly the OMA barracks), is located in Rose Hill Cemetery, Tulsa, Okla. While there are two pictures of gravesites on the OMA historic DVD, one with a cross and one with a Jewish Star, it is surmised that Meyer was disinterred from his grave in Europe, brought back to the U.S. by family and buried according to Jewish customs at Rose Hill. According to the records at Rose Hill, he was buried in the family plot on May 3, 1922, a full four years after he died in War.

Phil Goldfarb ('69) noted in his findings that Maurice Meyer's father, Leo Meyer, was not only politically connected as a mayor of Sayre and the first Oklahoma Secretary of State (1907-1910), he was the person who actually carried the Seal of Oklahoma from Guthrie to Oklahoma City when the Capitol was moved. He also served as State Auditor from 1911-1913 before moving to Tulsa to become the tax counsel to Mid Continent Oil. Meyer also founded the first professional baseball league in Oklahoma in 1912.

■ Updates to the extensive "Lost Cadets" records continue to arrive. Regrettably, often it is an update letting us know the cadet is no longer with us, as in the case of Brig. Gen. Judson F. Miller who we just learned passed away on Aug. 31 of last year. Miller was one of 10 OMA cadets to achieve the General Officer rank. He entered OMA in the 10th grade and two days after his 17th birthday, Pearl Harbor occurred and set in motion events that would govern his life for the next 33 years. He enlisted for service in the war and was selected for Officer Candidate School, commissioned as a Second Lieutenant. He served in the European Theater and earned the Purple Heart for wounds suffered in combat. He also saw combat duty in Korea as one of the youngest majors in the U.S. Army. In Vietnam, where he was a Colonel, he directed a 4,200 man brigade of the Fourth Infantry Division and led the brigade in combat against the communist forces.

He received the Silver Star, Bronze Star and Joint Service Commendation Medal. He also received the Distinguished Service Medal of Chung Moo and the Presidential Unit Citation, both from the Republic of Korea. He was promoted to Brigadier General at the age of 43.

He was inducted into the OMA Hall of Fame in 1988.

At age 51, Miller enrolled in law school, obtained a law

■ New 'Rabbits' studying Rabbit Manuals

New OMA recruits (mannequins) bring a touch of authenticity to the Museum's restored Barracks room. Visitors enjoy this exhibit as the setting brings to life the cadet's way of life.

■ LeRoy L. Lette, one of OMA's World War II Killed In Action cadets, attended OMA five years, rose from Private to 1st Captain. He was editor of the first war time, cadet-produced yearbook, The Vedette, 1942.

■ SERVICE ACADEMY ADDITIONS:

- Capt. William Burns Castle, ('40), has been added to the List of Cadets who went to Military Service Academies. He was a West Point graduate, 1946. At OMA, he was known as Billy B. Castle.
- Marvin Chapman Reed ('40), is another West Point graduate.

■ Charles D. Hatfield, Jr. recalls Capt. James Burruss as an "inspiration" and "role model." Burruss taught physics, science and mathematics. Burruss died July 18 at 79.
