

PROPOSAL NARRATIVE SECTION

Instructions: Provide a thorough explanation of the following information about your proposed scholarly research activity.

1. Abstract: (200 words or less)

The first education generated by parents creates the first association with their family through parents' love and discipline, which significantly related with significant levels of psychological well-being and sense of belonging in a certain affiliation. The positive social experiences and association with in-group members in college life plays a significant role in improving social, emotional, and academic adjustments by mediating role of higher personal self-worth. While students spend a significant amount of time with their friends and participate the social interactions in college life, many scholars have paid attention on the important role of first association created by their parents creating personal self-esteem. The purpose of the study is to scrutinize the direct and indirect effects of the first educational leadership style on student-athletes' social, emotional, and academic adjustments, by mediating role of personal self-esteem.

2. How will your project promote RSU's mission: (100 words or less)

It helps RSU to understand the important role of the first education and leadership style on student-athletes' social, emotional, and academic adjustments.

It helps RSU athletic department to understand how leadership or educational style promote student-athletes personal self-esteem.

3. Problem Statement and/or Project Description: (350 words or less).

Student-athletes are facing a unique situation involved in academic and athletic departments. It is important for student-athletes to provide positive experiences in group associations and disciplines. In addition, those educations significantly influence their social, mental, and academic lives college life. Although student-athletes have educated in previous years from different organizations, it seems the first educations from their parents significantly creates their future life college.

4. Research Strategy: (750 words or less).

In this study, we explored the relationship between the first leadership styles and academic, social and emotional adjustment as well as the potential role of self-esteem may play in mediating these relationships. The purpose of this study was two-fold: 1) to examine the effects of the first leadership styles on personal self-esteem, and 2) to explore the direct and indirect effects of parenting leadership styles on social, emotional, and academic adjustment in college, by mediating the role of personal self-esteem

